New ENWHP Standard

ENWHP is launching a new Standard for accrediting good practice in workplace health promotion in June 2021. Based on more than 20 years of identifying and evaluating Models of Good Practice as well as a number of national award schemes, the ENWHP Standard is the first European Accreditation system to be made available to companies and organisations who wish to gain recognition for their activities in the field.

Training for WHP

The ENWHP members have developed a number of training courses related to WHP over the years. These have come from European projects taking place in a number of countries and funded by a number of different EU programmes.

These have focused on a range of target groups such as health professionals, and company level actors who wish to implement WHP.

They have focused on a range of issues - general health promotion, applicant organisation. The Standard has three levels - Bronze, Silver, and Gold. Applying for the Standard at any level involves providing evidence that your organisation is active in a range of areas and is meeting certain criteria in those areas.

More information on the Standard will be available on the Website in July and all newsletter recipients will receive full notification of the details of the Standard as soon as they are published.

mental health promotion, and return to work amongst others. They are available in online and face-to-face formats.

Research reports

ENWHP are launching a research report page to the website. This will summarise what we believe to be significant research in the WHP field which can help improve the practice of WHP in real life settings. Research summaries will be short - no more than 300 words and will focus on research findings that are robust and recent.

Any ENWHP member can suggest research summaries to the ENWHP team. If you would like to suggest some content, please send it to info@enwhp.net
